

The Inside of the Pot / the Twilight Hours

The Coronavirus lockdown forced us to live a minimum life like a hermit or a wizard would do. That reminded me of a tale of The Inside of the Pot in Book of the Later Han or other historical spot gardens. In such a difficult time, one of the things that artists could do was to reveal the structure of human behavior through a passageway connecting in and out. For me, that passageway was just a lens on my mobile phone that took outside images from the isolated sites. And, that time is almost like the twilight hours blurring the borders between illusion and reality; games and real-life.

Yosuke Ito

Sorry, no studio views. My studio is outside the room...
Y!

Artist's website

Facebook

Instagram

mail@yosukeito.com